Isrgel Invites Brandt for Visit, First by a Chancellor in Office

JERUSALEM, Feb. 7 (Reuters), or by her successor if she stands -Israel bas invited West German by her declared intention of Chancellor Willy Brandt to pay an official visit-the first by a West German chancellor to the Jewish state. The invitation, a major move to normalize relations between the two countries, posed a delicate problem for the Israeli govern-ment in view of the strong emotions still felt in some sectors here over the murder of six million Jewe by the Nazl regime. In Bonn, government circles indicated some puzzlement about the reported invitation, which they said had not been discussed with Bonn beforehand in any way and which, as of this afternoon, had not been delivered.] . - A visit is bound to give rise to controversy and possible demonstrations by right-wing extremists in Escael.

They feel that the time has not yet come for Israel to welcome officially the representative of a country with many inhabitants who participated either actively or passively in the Nazi regime.

The government's decision to invite Mr. Brandt was doubtlessly facilitated, however, by what is regarded here as his own impeccable past as a staunch anti-Nazi figure who spent the years of World War II outside Ger-

Political sources also point to his present distinction as a Nobel Peace Prize laureate.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said today that the invitation, manimously approved by the sovernment coalition parties, was sent out last night by Premier Golda Meir and was to be handed to Mr. Brandt by Israel's ambas-sador in Bonn, Eliashiv Ben-retiring after the 1973 elections, political sources said here. The visit will set an official and symbolic seal on the slow and often painful process of reconciliation which began two decades ago with the signing by Israel's first premier, David Ben-Garion, and West Germany's first chanceller, Konrad Adenauer, of the reparations agreement by which Bonn indemnified Israel as the heir of the Jews persecuted by the Nazis.

No date for the visit was mentioned in the invitation but observers here believed that it would not take place before September at the earliest, and possibly not before 1973.

Some Critics of Nixon's Plan Help Communists, Aide Says

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 (IHT). -Presidential assistant H.R. Haldeman today charged "partisan critics" of President Nixon's victually aiding and abetting" the enemy. Mr. Laird linked the long-term prospects for scaling down the flow of heavy arms into Indochina with the overall prospects for improved U.S.-Soviet relations particular in the trade field. However, he has not been one who has favored opening up greater trade with Russia in certain areas until there are demon-strably better relations between the two superpowers. "The key to peace in Southeast Asia," he said, is also "in the trade route" with Russia. The United States, Mr. Laird said, "should move toward this [more trade with Russial but not until we have better understandings with the Russians."

In effect, Mr. Laird reflects a view that is widespread in the U.S. government, that the Soviets have placed high priority on expanding trade with this country, (Continued on Page 2, Col. 8)

India Is Reported Planning Dacca Pullout in Month

NEW DELHI, Feb. 7 (AP).—All Indian troops will be withdrawn from Bangladesh by the end of next month under an agreement reached by Prime Ministers Indira Gandhl and Mujibur Rahman, United News of India reported tonight.

The agency, in a dispatch from Calcutta quoting reliable sources, said the two leaders felt that the purpose for which the troops were sent into the state—when it was still known as East Pakistan—had been fulfilled. Mrs. Gandhi and Sheikh Mujib held discussions in

"Nice to see you" and "I have no comment."

"My conscience admonishes ma not to let him say anything," explained Mr. Nessen, who had won several delays in Mr. Irving's appearance on grounds that he as an attorney was not fully sequainted with the case. Mrs. Irving is expected to appear before the grand jury to-morrow, along with Richard Sus-kind, who helped Mr. Irving com-pile the Hughes book, and Nina van Pallandt, one of the "other women" in Mr. Irving's life.

Up until his date with the federal prosecutor, Mr. Irving continued to assure friends that they would be "surprised at how simple it all is." He spent last night exchanging quips on the case with three cronies at a Chinese restaurant and poring over an article about himself in an advance copy of Lafe magazine with obvious relish.

He read his fortime from a Chinese cookie smilingly, according to a New York Post reporter who was present. The forecast in the fortune cookie was: "Your efforts will be rewarded."

The Life article was accompanied by a photograph of a scuba-diving teacher, Ann Baxter, who allegedly accompanied Mr. Irving to the Virgin Islands for a meeting with Mr. Hughes that never materialized.

The meeting was eet up in December, Mr. Irving claims, after he had spent about nine mouths taping 100 interviews with Mexico and the Bahamas, where the billionaire occupies a hotel hideaway.

Newsweek magazine reports in this week's issue that a transcript with marginal notes in Mr. Hughes's handwriting, reportedly used by Mr. Irving to convince his McGraw-Hill Inc. publishers of his contacts with the billionaire, may be an 18-year-old document. It says that a former writer for the now-defunct Look magazine remembers that Mr. Hughes made corrections on such a document for a Look article 18

Swiss authorities have issued warrants for the arrest of both Irvings on fraud and forgery chargee growing out of Mrs. Irving's use of Swiss bank accounts to deposit McGraw-Hill's checks and convert them into the $650,000. The Swiss have

Tutankhamen's Curse Is Back In Cairo News

CAIRO, Feb. 7 (OPT) -A Cairo Egyptologist has died after orga-nizing a new display of the treaeures of Tutankhamen, the pharach whose alleged curse has pursued experts for 50 years.

Archaeologist Kamal Mallakh

revealed yesterday that the head of the Egyptian antiquities de-partment, Kamal Mahrez, 52, had died of a stroke in Cairo a month

Mr. Mahrez had signed an agreement recently for 50 priceless objects from Tutankhamen's tomb to so on display at the British Museum in London marking 50 years since the discovery of the tomb by a British expedition. Mr. Maliakh said, "I dined with him a week before his death. He seemed in good health. He lived a quiet life."

Mr. Mahrez was the successor of Mohammed Mehdi, who was killed five years ago by an automobile while crossing a Cairo street soon after he signed en agreement to put treasures from Tutankhamen'e tomb on display in Paris. The legend of the curse arose after a series of sudden or violent deaths suffered by antiquarians associated with the discovery and opening of the

Kennedy on Prisoners GENEVA. Feb. 7 (Reuters).— Sen. Edward Kennedy, D., Mass., today discussed the problems of prisoners in North Vietnam, East Pakistan and Uister with the International Red Cross Committee

On a brief visit here before leaving for Dacca to study the refugee situation in the Indian subcontinent, Sen. Kennedy spent more than an hour with ICRC president Marcel Naville and senior officials at Red Cross heading that Mr. Rogers's statement on Thursday amounted to "an excessive and unacceptable intervention into Vietnamese internal affairs"

Today, Mr. Thieu was said to have taken action. A newspaper run by his private secretary reported that Mr. Thieu had telephoned his negotiator in Paris and told him that "from now on, any Vietnamese matter must be made public and interpreted by the Vietnamese delegation instead

Porter Reportedly Informed The newspaper, Tin Bong, also said that the negotiator, Ambassador Pham Dang Lam, had been given instructions to inform U.S. negotiator William Porter that:

"Any detail in the peace pro-posals relating to the internal affairs of South Vietnam must be set forth solely by the South Vietnamese delegation and only in this case are the proposals valid and recognized by the Republic of Vietnam."

The newspaper further reported that the Vietnamese Ambassador in Washington, Bui Diem, was ordered to have "immediate contacts" with American officials to find out what Mr. Rogers meant in his references to flexibility.

In agreeing originally to the American request that he offer to resign, Mr. Thieu opparently underestimated just how significant such a proposition might be and what it could lead to. Now Mr. Thieu has discovered that not only is Washington taking the matter seriously but they may even be prepared to speed up his departure and peraps even exclude him as a can-

Another disquieting surprise for Mr. Thieu must be the fact that the impression has taken hold among many South Vietnamese that, now that he has said he would go, it becomes only a ques-tion of time until it happens, This could lead in short order to an undermining of Mr. Thieu's

Uganda Tries Boy, 15, on Charge Of Inviting Invasion by Tanzania

JINJA, Uganda, Feb. 7 (UFD -A schoolboy accused of having invited Tunzanian President Julius Nyerere to invade Uganda went on trial today for sedition at a magistrate's court in this central Uganda industrial town.

Solomon Buleke, 15, has pleaded not guilty to the charge. The prosecution alleged that young Buleke admitted to police he wrote to Mr. Nyerere on Feb. 15, 1971, asking him to send troops to restore power in Uganda to former President Milton Obote. Mr. Obote had been ousted three weeks earlier by Gen. Idi Amin.

Police, he said, had threatened to "beat me up" and hand him over to the Uganda Army if he refused. The trial was adjourned until Saturday.

Earlier President Nixon signed a new federal law aimed at regulating the raising and spend-ing of election funds for presi-dential and congressional candi-dates in this high-cost era of television campaigning.

Mr. Nixon called the bill realistic and enforceable.

The new measure, effective in 60 days, becomes the first reform in campaign spending in nearly half a century, replacing the out-moded and toothless 1925 Cor-

It placed a celling on the amount that may be spent this year on behalf of presidential candidates, including primaries.

It also requires stiffer periodic financial reports and brings under control the myriad political rund-raising committees which in the past were able to circumvent spending restrictions.

Under a formula allowing roughly 10 cents a voter, each party will be permitted to spend up to $13.9 million on plugging their 1972 presidential nominees, but only about $8.4 million may be used for television and radio This compares with the $12.6

million spent by the Republicans in the 1968 Nixon campaign and the $6.1 million used by the Democrats in Hubert H. Humphrey's losing effort four years

In signing the bill Mr. Nixon said it is "an important step forward in an area which has been of great public concern."

He added: "Because I share that concern, I am pleased to give my approval to this bill."

Mr. Nixon, who waited until the deadline to sign the legisla-tion, said that it "will guard against campaign abuses and will work to build public confidence in the integrity in the electoral process." Some question arose about en-

Value-Added Tax Provides For Rebates

Nixon Project Spares Poor, Middle Groups

By Eileen Shanahan

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 (NYT). -The Nixon administration's tentative plan for a value-added tax includes rebates of at least part of the tax not just to poor families but to those well into the uppermiddle-income category-for example, a family of four with an income of $20,000 a year. The relate plan has been designed to blunt a main argument by opponents of the tax. This is that a value-added tax which is a type of national sales tax, costs the poor proportionately more than the middle class, and

The rebate plan is contained in the draft version of the tax that President Nixon has sub-mitted for study to the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, an organization of federal, state and local officials. Other Features

The draft plan would rebate all of the value-added tax to people below a specified income level and rebate part of the tax to people above that level. The rebate would decrease as income increased, to where there would be no rebate at all above the income level of $20,000 for a family of four.

The amount of money that would be rebated would not be the actual amount paid out in value-added taxes, even at the bottom of the income scale. Instead, it would be a flat amount at each level of income. For poor families, the rebate would approximate full reimbursement for value-added taxes paid.

The violence began as 300 police linked arms in an effort to hold back more than 500 angry miners. The miners were trying to stop trucks from entering or leaving the depot, which con-tains 100,000 tons of coke, the biggest fuel store left in the industrial Midlands region of Earlier the miners managed to rout most of the waiting trucks with a broadside of pies, fruit and eggs. Then two trucks forced their way through the picket lines, and the miners turned their fury onto the police. One policeman was punched in the stomach and had to be taken to a hospital. Others had their helmets knocked off as they grappled with the pickets.

One of the miners lay down in front of a truck leaving the depot, but police dragged him clear. The man lay down again in front of another truck, which stopped with only inches to spare amid a hall of bricks, stones and other missiles. Last Thursday at a power

Television Diplomacy

If it had not been preceded by ping-pong diplomacy, the advent of international negotiation on television might have had greater impact. If it were not that men-and women, and children-are dying in Southeast Asia, more amusement might have been derived from the juxtaposition of Xuan Thuy, chief North Vietnamese negotiator in Paris, and William P. Rogers, secretary of state of the United States, on 'Face the Nation."

As it is, there will doubtless be more interest in the substance of the television discussions than in the use of this new tool of diplomacy-more attention paid to the message than the medium. Little that was new, came through in the interviews, although the nuances of persistent differences are being minutely examined. It is all too evident that Hanoi is offering no golden bridge for an American retreat from Vietnam: those who favor such a retreatand that means nearly everyone in the United States-must face up to the implications of Hanoi's apparent decision to let the killing continue rather than risk a political settlement.

To be sure, Hanoi will still talk-but it has been harping on essentially the same string for many years now. It may say-as Mr. Thuy did-that the election of President Thien interposed new barriers to peace.

But President Thieu's legitimacy is quite as great as that of the heirs of Ho Chi Minh. who have been overlooked in all the arguing. How many can give their names and titles?

But apart from the tragedy barely obscured by the confrontation of ideas on the small screen, the fact of such a confrontation has its own significance, The Vietnamese discussions have gone from the extreme of secrecy to the maximum of public exposure. The green baize table, surrounded by uniformed envoys, where, in discreet seclusion and great dignity, the affairs of the world were managed in low tones by diplomats speaking French more or less well, has given way to the interpreted interview, hroadcast to the world at large under glaring lights.

This could be the way in which open covenants might be openly arrived at. But in the present case, it only seems to signalize the failure to arrive at any covenants under any conditions. Man has tried nearly every technique at human disposal for the solution of national goarrels—the Congress of Vienna, it may be recalled, waltzed-but has found that nothing really works when a will to agree is lacking. The addition of television, with the possibilities of shrewd manipulations of lights and makeup, may contain some new possibilities. Bot American experience with television debates in political confrontations is not encouraging.

Dilemma in Rhodesia

Upon drafting the formula for possible eventual majority rule that it intended to end Rhodesia's rebellion, Britain sent a commission to its erstwhile colony to determine whether the term, were acceptable to the people: both to the quarter-million whitee and the five million blacks, The Pearce Commission's explicit mandate was to explain the terms, which are complex, and to learn the people's views of them Its unavoidable implicit mandate was to sell the settlement, by indicating—fairly, in our view—that the most likely alternatives were, for the Smith regime, further world ostracism and economic pressure, and for the Africans, the conversion of the Smith government into a fully hardened apartheld state like South Africa. Working agrinst the commission were. of course, the Smith regime's rigidity and its hopes of further breaking the economic and political embaraces slapped on it in 1965. and the rising political consciousness of Rhodesia's blacks-their demand for, in elfect. freedom now.

Clearly, Mr. So ith admitted the Pearce Commission in the expectation that African opposition to the settlement would be modest, or at any rate contained. Precisely the opposite occurred: The commission's arrival touched off perhaps the most genuine democratic exercise in Rhodesia's history. In urban areas where tribal ways have weakened, larger popular demonstrations broke out and a dozen or more Africans were killed. Even in the rural tribal trust lands where the newly formed black nationalist African National Council was not allowed to operate, the chiefs-who are paid government hands -failed to muster shows of support for the proposed settlement. Eight supposedly tame Africans sitting in the Lower House rejected the settlement terms. How the Pearce Commission will interpret these expressions is uncertain. It is to remain in Rhodesia another month before filing its report.

There is a fair consensus now that the only certain way to prevent a white minority from fastening its hold on Rhodesia indefinitely would have been for Britain's then-Labor government to have used force when Rhodesia first broke away in 1985, But the moment passed, and with it, one might add, Labor's moral authority to urge any like course today. In 1972 it is inconceivable that... a Conservative government could consider the use of force, indeed, it has tried to make the deal which is undergoing its "test of acceptance" in Rhodesia now. Its own powerlessness is the central theme of the contemporary British lament

There are those who would comsel Africans to reject the admittedly imperfect compromise offered by Prime Minister Heath. They must accept, however, a responsibility to offer a viable alternative. Strong as the Viet Cong myth may be, it has yet to be proven out on the ground in Rhodesia, Black insurgents have proved no particular problem for the Smith regime, which in any event can and does call on neighboring South Africa for aid. At the least, Americans can avoid undermining the African cause by making gestures of support for Rhodesian white rule. Just such a gesture was made recently when Congress opened the way for Rhodesian chrome to enter the United States legally for the first time since 1965. Some American citizens have announced they plan to demonstrate at the docks when the first shipments of Rhedesian chrome arrive. They will be demonstrating for human dignity. THE WASHINGTON POST.

Italy: The Crisis Deepens

It is symbolic of the sad state of Italy's political and economic health that Rome was paralyzed by a general strike, called to protest soaring living costs, the day after Emilio Colombo gave up his effort to form a new government. So the political crisis drags on in the midst of deepening recession. Over the weekend President Leone made another attempt to form a new government, but the probability is that he will have to dissolve parliament a year early and call new elections this spring.

There will be risks for all of Italy's democratic parties in entering a premature election campaign from a backdrop of disarray and disunity. Bot most of them may conclude that an attempt to struggle on for another year in drift and instability would bring even greater dangers. It would be extremely difficult for any government in that pre-election climate to take the unpopular decisions necessary to revive the sagging economy.

Spring elections would have at least the positive by-product of postponing a referendum aimed at the repeal of Italy's divorce law,--a referendum certain to divide the country dangerously on religious lines and to throw the Christian Democrats into camp with the Fascists. Postponement would give the democratic parties a chance to amend the law to render it acceptable to Catholics. thus making the referendum unnecessary.

Mr. Colombo falled in his attempt to form a government mostly hecause his own Christian Democratic leaders insisted on drastic changes in the fourteen-month-old divorce law that the "lay" democratic parties could not accept. So the Christian Democrats must take the blame for Mr. Colombo's failure and they will also be held primarily responsible if spring elections bring the gains now expected for the neo-Fascist Italian Social Movement.

CROOKSTOWN, Northern Ireland.-What Britain must do is take its troops out of Northern Ireland now. People will ask: What will happen when the troops come out? After the Sunday in Derry (Jan. 30), that's a pretty ck question. When people ask you who will protect you if the British Army will protect us from the British Army? And so they should take their troops out now and seek a political settlement.

The only political settlement that will be of any consequence to the people of the North of Ireland is one that improves their standard of living, both economically and socially, and that means a radical economic program. In the immediate sense, internment has got to be ended.

We have the kind of legislation against marching that led to 13 people being killed. One no longer has a right to march in a peaceful demonstration—that's against the law-and one no longer has the right to publish articles against the State-that'e against the law. Unless these things are ended, then more and more people, feeling themselves deprived of any democratic means of ob-jecting, will turn to violence as the only way they can see of fighting their way out of the corner into which the government has pushed them.

I am asked whether there would not be large-scale bloodshed if the troops left. My answer is: We've had it. We've had it from the British Army. If we have to defend ourselves against the might of an organized army, we'll defend our areas, our ghettos and ourselves against anybody else'e army.

The British Army does not afford us protection. We afford ourselves what protection we need against any comers, and the training we've had in being forced to do it against the British Army

Battle Fronts

There are two battle fronts at the moment. The long-term problem is to create a country in which the people of Ireland can live in harmony, live in peace and live in dignity.

The immediate fight is against British imperialism, which means in its most immediate terms that we have got to have barricades on the fringes of the Catholic ghettos. We have got to keep the British Army from coming

But if they did, then we class population of the ghettos on one side of the barricades, the army on the other, and admittedly the Protestants doing nothing, protecting them. What's going to happen if they feel that Britain would sell them out-which of course she would if it was in her own political and economic interest-I don't know. If the British take the army away, then we'll still be on our side of the barricades for exactly the same reason, to defend our areas. I don't think that anyone can point to any concentrated sttempt by the Catholic comminity to attack the Protestant

T ONDON.—This, I am afraid, is going to be what S. J. Perelman called, "The night the old nostalgia burned down." Suppose a New Yorker picked up his paper and read that Bloomingdale's, that Gimbel's, and that Macy's, was going out of business: Would not a tear start unbidden to his eye? For Gamage's, the department store that everybody loved like a rather seedy favorite uncle, is to close and be pulled down, and some doubtless hideous complex of offices and other rubbish is to be erected in its

To Grow and to Die-III

By Anthony Lewis

ONDON.-A hundred years ago John Stuart Mill urged human society to limit its population and wealth and seek "the stationary state." He had a vision of a cramped and depleted earth. He sincerely hoped, he said, that men "will be content to be stationary long before necessity compels them to it."

Mill's was a premature vision, and for a long time hardly anyone shared it. Now, suddenly, impressive scientific evidence is being put to us that necessity compels an early end to the dominant earthly ambition of economic growth. For the exponential growth of population and production is putting strains on our environment that cannot

To talk about limiting growth as a philosophical matter is easy enough. But when one begins to consider the specific changes of course that would be required of mankind, the difficulties are soon seen to be enormous. The economic habits of a millennium. the motivations, the very conception of a good society would

as a social goal, for example, would be transformed. In most societies. East and West, there are gross inequalities of wealth today. They are made politically tolerable in good part by the notion of the whole economic pie growing constantly larger so that everyone can have a bigger slice. That is why politicians from Breshnev to Edward Heath promise their constituents faster economic growth.

But what happens if everyone in a society knows that there can be no increase in the total volume of material goods? Is it still bearable that one man has three cars in his garage and another not enough to eat?

Similar considerations affect our traditional view of competition as a motivating economic force. Leading ecologists say we must adopt a policy of no net increase in capital investment from now on

And does not that again imply a change in one's whole view of social organization, toward a less material society on the Chinese model, with enough for everyone to est but little competition for goods or ease? Does it not follow in international as in national life that an end to growth must not be an imposition by

One can look at the future projected by the ecologists and be shaken by what it asks for survival Or one can regard it as a challenge to man's psyche and organizing skills.

Powerless to Act

A correspondent, one who has begun to be convinced of the inescapable significance of exponential growth, writes to argue that men who understand will nevertheless be powerless to act effectively. For who, he asks, are the "we" who can take remedial steps? Even if the United States now rejected the growth fallacy, bow would that matter if the rest of the world went on as before?

In a world of nation-states the correspondent writes, we are fools not to est, drink and be merry because there is not and cannot be any 'we' who can prevent 'us' from dying tomorrow. And I and mine expect to die

The unwillingness of politicians to recognize ecological necessity so far makes that view a con-vincing one. But there is another, a more hopeful view of human nature. Like John Stuart Mill, those of this mind will think that a stable state is not only necessary but desirable a society in which the mind and the arts would matter more than owning goods. They will hope that man will adapt as be has before. It may seem fronic, but those prepared to grapple with the idea of doom will be the optimists.

Now it is going. I do not know what, if anything, this says about the changing pattern of public taste; perhaps people no longer want what Gamage's sold, and no longer want the way they sold it. But whatever the reasons, Lon-

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 (AP) -Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said today he takes Egyp tian threats to start a new war "quite seriously."

Their Literary Falling Out in the 1920s

Pétain Found De Gaulle Lively Ghost Writer

By John L. Hess PARIS, Feb. 7 (NYT) .- Specialists have long believed that Marshal Henri Philippe Pétain markial Henri Philippe Pétain once had a staff writer named Charles de Gaulle and that they had a failing out. Now the De Gaulle family has released their full literary correspondence for publication in a weekly magazine of Gaulliana.

The letters disclose that De Gaulle, as a captain, was just as proud and intransigent as he would be later as a statesman. Book publishers and military commandants alike may find the exchange breathtaking. From 1925 to 1927, De Gaulle was engaged full time in writing a book for Petain, the hero of Verdun and vice-chairman of the Supreme War Council, 'The work was to be called "The Soldier," an analysis of the comportment of the French military in history.

No Writer

The marsial, admittedly no writer, was pleased at the cap-tain's first chapter and told him so. [Pétain was elected to the Académie Française, guardian of French literary tradition.] The manuscript of the chapter in question, with the marshal's few suggested changes and De Gaulle's tart rejection of them, pleased writers here more than editors and disciplinarians. The copy was in the same regal, elegant 18th-century style that would characterize all of De Gaulle's writings.

One passage, "Sypical of De Gaulle's—and Petain's—devotion to the army and their disdain for politicians, describes the leaders of the French Revolution as strip-ping their military chiefs "of ping their military chiefs prestige; often of life, sometimes of honor."

The marshal transposed the last two phrases to read "sometimes of honor, often of life," in the margin. The captain wrote tartly, as to a dull editor, "It's an scension: prestige, life, honor." Thereafter, Petain stopped fussing with De Gaulle's copy. But toward the end of 1927, their relations seemed to have cooled. De Gaulle, now a major in eastern France, learned that other ghosts had been assigned to expand the work and wrote Pétain demanding; "with respectful in-sistence," that "you submit to no other pen what I have submitted only to you." De Gaulle said that since the word of its authorship would in any case get out, the marshal must "acknowledge" his collaborator prominently in a

De Gaulle would tell friends later that Pétain's handwritten letters were always friendly, while the typewritten ones were hostile. He concluded that Petain's staff was stirring up the quarrel. In any case, Pétain cooled on "The Soldier" and it never appeared. His several notes to

La Presse, Montreal, Ends 3½-Month Strike

MONTREAL, Feb. 7 (AP).-Employees at La Presse, which has the largest circulation of any French-language newspaper in North America, voted yesterday to return to work, ending a sixmonth labor dispute and clearing the way for the newspaper, closed since Oct. 27, to resume publica-corporating the five chapters he written for Pétain into a forthcoming book, "France and its Army." De Gaulle, now a colonel, asked Pétain to sign a preface, which he enclosed.

The marshal exploded. In a typewritten letter, he said that the chapters were a staff paper and that he had locked them up in his files because of De Gaulle's claim to authorship. He forbade publication of what he described as his property.

De Gaulle fired back a long letter defending his position and reminding Pétain that much had changed. "I was 37 years old then; I am 48 now. Morally, I have been wounded—even by you, Marshal—I have lost illusions, abandoned ambitions. (But) regarding ideas and style, I was ignored then. I am beginning to be no longer ignored."

This prophetic suggestion that De Gaulle's military career was nearly over but another career was beginning seemed to soften Pétain, who asked De Gaulle to call on him. But the interview ended, according to De Gaulle, in his refusal of a direct command to hand over the proofs of his work.

A few years later, a Vichy court condemned De Gaulle in absentia to death for treason. After the Liberation, a court passed the same sentence upon the marshal. But the general commuted it to

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 7 (Reuters).-Pope Paul VI today met a high-level delegation from the Russian Orthodox Church which has come here to discuss collaboration with the Catholic Church in the training of priests, Vatican officials said.

The idea of establishing collaboration was explored last August by the Rev. Pedro Arrupe, head of the Jesuit order, during a visit to the Soviet Several liberal writers, such as Zbigniew Herbert, Andrzej Kijowski and Mieczyslaw Jastrun, were also elected to the 24-member executive board.

Jerzy Putrament, a leading hard-liner who is often referred to as chief party apologist, tied with six other delegates for the last place on the board, finally winning by one vote on the second ballot.

We accomplished as much as was possible under the circumstances, commented a delegate speaking for the liberal writers. which about a third of the executive board are liberals, another third staunch hard-liners, while the rest can go either way.

Perhaps even more significant than the composition of the union leadership, some delegates noted, was the adoption of a resolution to change the organization's statutes in order to deny the executive board the power to expel writers at will.

The last Writers' Congress, in 1969, followed a government crackdown on opposition intelicctuals, especially Jews. Many liberal writers were expelled, and the entire executive board came under the control of party stalwarts, The 1969 congress changed the union statutes, enabling the executive board to dismiss writers summarily.

Llewellyn E. Thompson Is Dead

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 (NYT), -Liewellyn E. Thompson, 67, former U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, died yesterday in nearby Bethesda, Md., Mr. Thompson, whose career as an expert on Soviet affairs spanned 30 years, had entered the National Institutes of Health last week for treatment of cancer.

Perseverance, patience, willingness to talk and a capacity for friendship were all qualities that served to make Liewellyn E. Thompson ir. one of the nation's most effective diplomats in often difficult dealings with the Russians during the cold war. As an exponent of the art of quiet diplomacy, he managed to keep open the channels of communica-tion between the United States and the Soviet Union at times when the two superpowers were barely on speaking terms.

For almost 30 years, starting in 1940, Mr. Thompson was involved with the Russians. He was twice ambassador to Mo:-cow—from 1957 to 1962 and from 1967 to 1969. For 10 years, ending in 1955, he talked with the Russians about an Austrian state treaty. There were 379 meetings before the accord was finally worked out, a feat of endurance for which he received the U.S. Distinguished Service Award. Once asked how he managed with the Russians, Mr. Thompson replied: "I am a great believer in quiet diplomacy. I think that in the loog run it gives a better chance for finding successful solutions to our problems."

The tall, slim, rather reserved envoy might have added that he was a great practitioner of personal diplomacy. When he was in Moscow, a day seldom passed when he did not meet high-ranking Soviet officials in one social setting or another and engage them in conversation. He was on cordial terms with Andrei A. Gromyko, the foreign minister, and on friendly ones with Nikita S. Khrushchev, the premier, often talking with him for hours on

He Was Absolved

In the severe Soviet-American crisis in 1960 over the U-2 flight, Khrushchev publicly exonerated Mr. Thompson from responsibility for the incident. And during the Berlin crisis of 1961, the Soviet leader went out of his way to drink a toast to the ambassador. Soviet confidence in Mr.

Thompson's integrity, confidence which did not always extend to the U.S. government, sprang in part from the fact that he spoke fluent Russian, that he took the trouble to see as much of Soviet life as possible and that he entertained thousands of Russians at Spasso House, his official

Although Mr. Thompson's achievements in Moscow were considerable—the cultural exchange agreement, paving the way for the nuclear-test-ban treaty, setting up the Vienna. "summit" between Khrushchev and President John F. Kennedy -he himself thought they were essentially negative.

"I don't think I ever made things worse, although there are great opportunities for causing parm here," he said at the end of his second Moscow mission, in 1969.

As an expert on Soviet matters Mr. Thompson ranked with George F. Kennan and Charles E. Bohlen, who also served in Moscow. Discussing Mr. Thompson's amhassadorial role, Prof. Adam Ulam of Harvard, a Soviet-affairs specialist, said recently: "Within the limitations American policy toward the Soviet Union, Thompson was the most effective of our Moscow envoys over the last 20 or 25 years. He understood Soviet motivations very clearly, as he demonstrated in the Cuban mis-sile crizis of 1962. He recalled then that the Russians were not much concerned with Cuba or missiles as with obtaining a bargaining position on other matters. His advice to President

Kennedy was more profoundly based than that of many of his The son of a rancher, Llewellyn Thompson was born in Las Animas, Colo., on Aug. 24, 1904. As a youth, he worked on his father's spread, in a general store and in a logging camp in western Washington. On a boat trip from Seattle to Los Angeles, he met a retired consul, whose account of his life as diplomat excited and inspired the young man. Back home, he enrolled in the University of Colorado and worked his way through. After receiving his bachelor's degree in 1928, he attended the Foreign Service School of Georgetown University in Washington and was appointed a Foreign Service officer in January, 1929. He began his career as a viceconsul in Ceylon, shifting to Geneva in 1933 and moving up to consul in 1937. Meanwhile, he

Llewellyn Thompson served as an American adviser at conferences in Geneva of the International Labor Office. During most of 1940, when the war in Europe was escalating into World War II, Mr. Thompson attended the Army War College in the United States. The following year he was posted to Moscow as second secretary and consulat the American Embassy. In the summer of 1941 the Germans were hammer-ing at the gates of Moscow, and the diplomatic corps moved with the Foreign Ministry and most the Soviet government to Kuybyshev on the middle Volga. Mr. Thompson was assigned to stay in Moscow to look after the embassy and other U.S. property and interests.

MUSIC IN MARSEILLES-

Penderecki's 'Devils'

By David Stevens

MAPSEILLES, Feb. 7 (IET) - for his estensible association with Since its world premiere in the forces of darkness. Hamburg in 1969, Krzystof Penderecki's "The Devils of Loudun" has been making the rounds of opera houses of avant-garde inclinations and has been recorded. It arrived in France over the weekend as the main offering of Marseilles' second Festival of Contemporary Opera.

Both dramatically and musically, it is pretty strong stuff. The story is currently familiar from the Ken Russell film, and earlier from John Whiting's play and, the original literary source, Aldous Huxley's case study of witch hunting. It tells the real story of how the sexual hysteria of a chapter of Ursuline nuns in a small French city was encouraged and used by Richelieu and his lieutenants to override political opposition and destroy a priest, who was burned at the stake more for the enemies he had made than

Kent at Columbia

NEW YORK, Feb. 7 (Reuters). -Columbia University has been given 3,300 drawings, sketches and manuscripts from the personal collection of Rockwell Kent, the artist who died last March at the age of 88.

The Polish composer's work is hardly a conventional opera. He uses vast and conventional musical forces, but in his own way. The orchestral music of tone clusters, repeated figures and blocks of sound seems to develop parallel to the action, rather than or-ganically with it, providing a powerful and dramatic backdrop. Against this the vocal parts—ranging from more or less conventional singing through Sprechstimme to more or less ordinary speech stand out sharply.

Yet as gripping as the music is and as adroit as Margherita Wallmann's staging was here, the horrors it relates are so strong, the sexual frenzy of the "possessed" muns so extreme, the farcical elements so gruesome, that on the stage the opera sometimes seemed unable to realize its own intensity and testered instead on the brink of unintended comedy.

Sometimes the laughter seemed sought for, as 'n the rather too Offenbachian figures of Mannoury and Adam, the clownish doctor and apothecary who were Father Urbain Grandier's chief enemies in Loudum. Elsewhere it was not, as when the nakedness of the nuns could be all too easily detected as theatrical deception. But in general the opera's 30 brief scenes unfolded quickly and with strong impact. Miss Wallmann staged the nuns' mass dementia with a shrewd choreographic sense and Grandler's torture and humiliation with gruesome power, and the reality of the devils in the nuns' minds was cism that routed a visible demon up into the stage flies. The most repellent of the rites of exordism—the one Huxley calls Sister Jeanne's "miraculous enema"-was mercifully hidden by a sheet, although the shrieks and writhings behind it were electrifying enough.

Helia THezan was outstanding in the central role of Sister Jeanne, singing her flendishly difficult part strongly and suggesting much of the ambiguity that the opera cannot make explicitnow seeming really possessed, at other times calculating or remorseful. Julien Hass had little chance to suggest Grandier's strikingly suggested in an exormonstrous charm, and made little of it, but in the third act he rose to the challenge of the priest's moving inner transformation in ONDON, Feb. 7 CET).-A weekend of mixed idioms, if not of mixed media, brought Elton John and Eartha Kitt to the Royal Festival Hall and the Queen Elizabeth Hall respectively to rub shoulders and match talent with prestigious classical music ensembles.

Elton John-born Reginal Kenneth Dwight-and his rock group appeared in concert with the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, while Miss Ritt sang Weill, Gershwin, Porter, Rodgers and Arlen with the accomplished and versatile Nash Ensemble. Both draw capacity houses and were greeted rapturously by admirers for whom they could do no wrong.

In each case the mixture, or juxtaposition, of idioms worked out more satisfactorily than such associations usually do. The explanation is easy enough: taste and intelligence. The Royal Philharmonic, instead of imposing half a program of symphonic repertoire upon a rock audience, as orchestras commonly feel obliged to do under such circumstances, simply provided discreet reinforcement and backing, arranged and conducted by Paul Buckmaster, for the second half of an Elton John concert. For Miss Kitt, the Nash Ensemble, suitably dressed not in soup and fish, but in gray turtleneck sweaters, provided a framework of early classical jazz by Stravinsky, Bohuslav Martinu

It may be doubted that the philharmonic added much of substance to Elton John's performance. As a fivent planist—he studied organ at the Royal Academy of Music—and resourceful singer in the contemporary Afro-American idiom, he gets along well enough without even his own backing group of guttars and percussion. But strings and occasional fill-ins by woodwind and brass did add variety to a sequence of songs, all by John and his lyricist, Bernie Taupin, that tend to sound one very like another.

The Nash program had an astutely calculated period atmosphere. They played the suite from Stravinsky's "L'Histoire du Soldat" (1918) and a suite from Martinu's ballet, "Ia Revue de Cuisine" (1927), ideal companion pieces for Miss Kitt's singing of songs from Weill's

"Threepenny Opera" (1928) and "Happy End" (1928).

To speak of Eartha Kitt's "singing" is stretching things a hit.

She has always been more discuse, in the European fashion, than singer, and as such a distinctive and effective performer. Here is an art better suited to Welli-Brecht than to the American songwriters to whom she devoted herself at the end of the concert in special arrangements by Richard Rodney Bennett,

For these she dared an improvised stage set composed of a devenport, a leopard skin rug and a bottle of champagne in an ice bucket, stretching out on the daverport for "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" and on the rug for "Love for Sale." Rather too much of a good-or bad-thing, perhaps, and her disregard of melody would make Billie Holiday sound like Doris Day. But she knows her own resources; she knows her public, and she had a big success;

FASHIONS IN ITALY

Facing Facts at a Trade Fair

By Hebe Dorsey TURIN, Peb. 7 (IFT),—The

Italian clothing industry has been through a rough year. A combination of strikes, salary raises, economic recession and political instability has resulted in the closing down of a great number of small and medium-sized factories. The number of hours of unemployment jumped seven timesfrom 9,600,000 in 1970 to 65,350,-000 in 1971. These figures were given by Count Ducrey Giordano, president of the Samia trade fair. which closes today. Since 1950, another reliable source said, the number of readyto-wear houses has dwindled from 4,200 to 3,000.

Less Is More

That is why Count Giordano made a point this season of grouping Samia and Moda Selezione (another deluxe ready-towear fair usually held at a later

"We need fewer trade fairs," Count Giordano said, "Not more. Lack of coordination is suicide," he added. "Both from a fashion and an economic viewpoint, we have to join forces to offer a coherent and logical image."

Count Giordano, who has been resident of Samis since 1967, is a dedicated man whose secret passion is teaching Oriental philosophy at the university in Turin. Samia is a nonprofit, privately sponsored organization now in its 18th year which holds two fairs a year. Count Giordano and that the transfer of the state said that the number of exhibitors has doubled since he took over. There are now 520 houses whose exhibits are spread over 16,200 square meters and attract 19,000 buyers, of which 15 percent are foreigners. In size, the Samia fair comes third in Europe after Igedo (Dusseldorf) and the French ready-to-wear salon.

The volume is hard to evaluate, Count Giordano sald, but it runs into millions of dollars. "One single Spanish department store," he said, "bought $1 million worth of merchandise, Our biggest foreign clients are Germany follow-ed by Spain and the Middle East." But Samia caters mainly to the home market," Samia opened its doors this weekend with the usual brouhabs. As in most trade fairs, the styles were run-of-the-mill and mass-oriented. But it was interesting to see that the Italians are almost as quick as the Japanese these days when it comes to copying. The salon was full of the latest trends: ruffles, the sailor look, bare backs, kimono sieeves, belted coats, taffeta dresses and bright colors.

Music in Italy: Puccini Makes a Florentine Debut

By William Weaver

FLORENCE, Feb. 7 (IPT) -The Puccini opera "Le Villi," a work written in 1383, when the author was 25 and just a few months out of the conservatory, has just had its Florentine premiere, which was a con-siderable and deserved success. "Le Villi" was composed for a new opera contest and, although it failed to win the prise, it had influential admirers who arranged for a performance in Milan in 1884. The young, unknown musician was launched. Like "Edgar," the opera that Villi" has a murky libratio by Ferdinando Fontana. Though the text has been much criticized, it is easy to follow—the story is the same as that of "Giselle"—and its two brief acts offer some good lyrical opportunities for the three singers: father, daughter and faithless lover.

Puccini actually subtitled the work "Opera Ballo" and there is a long symphonic intermezzo to accompany a danced and mimed part of the story. The triumph of Puccini's later works understandably thrust "Le Villi" deeper into oblivion, so performances of it are rare even now when Italian opera houses have a regular policy of reviving little-known works by popular com-posers of the past.

Puccini scholars have tended . to dismiss the work. William Ashbrook, in his study of Puccini's operas, calls the score "dim" but this dismissal seems unfair, when one actually sees the piece in the theater. At least two of the arias—the soprano's en-trance and the tenor's return are touching and effective; and the intermesso is also cogent and

The Florence revival on Friday night was fortunate in the choice of tenor, the young Veriano Lu-chetti, with his sweet, yet virile voice. Opposite him, Mietta Sighele was an acceptable, though somewhat generic heroine. Mario Zanasi sang the father with con-viction. All would have been better, no doubt, if Hans Georg Rathen's condocting had been nore supple and heartfelt. Director Roberto Guicciardini decided to set the action in an incongruous Lehar-like 1890s. This shift allowed him to create a visually exciting and somber pantomimed funeral during the intermezzo, but the death of the treacherous Roberto at the hand . of the Wills, who were mere holiday-makers throwing stream-ers, lost all impact. Lorenzo Ghiglia's sets and costumes were handsome. The opera was given in Puc-cint's revised version of 1884. The rest of the evening included a short one-act opera, "Swan Song," by the young Florentine Marco Vavolo, a sympathetic and affecting setting of a Chekhov scene, and a revival of Luigi Dallapiccola's "Il Priedition seen here three years ago.

Convertibility Seen Key To Dollar's Weakness

By Edwin L. Dale Jr. WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 (NYT). made the agreement have not A prominent expert on the world monetary system believes that the chief reason for the recent weakness of the dollar on foreign exchange markets is the failure of the leading nations, and particularly the United States, to move toward at least an interim arrangement for the official convertibility of the dollar. Edward M. Bernstein, former director of research for the International Monetary Fund and now a consultant to central banks, has built part of his case in the Quarterly Review of Model, Roland & Co., a New York investment firm. His article argoing for a limited degree of convertibility of the dollar was written before the recent unsettlement in the foreign exchange markets.

Mr. Bernstein continues to regard the Dec. 18 Smithsonian agreement on a new pattern of currency exchange rates as a good one. His complaint is that the Group of Ten nations that

U.K. Retail Sales Rise in December

LONDON, Feb. 7 (AP-DJ).— Britain's retail trade continued strong in December, the Department of Trade and Industry reported today.

It said the seasonally-adjusted index of the volume of retail trade rose to 107.1 from a revised 106.8 for November. The index has a base of 100 for 1966. A jump in sales volume by food stores more than offset a decline in sales volume by non-food-stores during the month, it said. New installment credit extended by finance houses and retailers in December totaled a seasonally-adjusted £186 million, down from £198 million the previous month and down from 1188 million in October, For 1971 as a whole, the department said new credit extended totaled a seasonally adjusted $2001 pillion, up 17 percent from the previous year.

Japan Capital Spending Seen Falling 5 Percent lars would be readily accepted.

TOKYO, Feb. 7 (AP-DJ) -Japan's major corporations plan to spend $10.86 billion for plant One Dollar and equipment in the first half of 1972, down 49 percent from the preceding six months, the Economic Planning Agency estifollowed up on the paragraph of the communique that said, among other things:

"It was agreed that attention should be directed to the appropriate monetary means and divi-sion of responsibilities for defending stable exchange rates and for insuring a proper degree of con-vertibility of the dollar." Mr. Bernstein said over the weekend that both private holders of dol-lars and "third country" central banks—the dozens of smaller countries that hold dollars—contimue to have doubts about whether the pattern of exchange rates will be stable and, therefore, whether the dollar will maintain its present value.

Assurance Needed He believes that this has led to some outright selling of dolhars for other currencies or, equally important, decisions by many others to stay invested in strong foreign currencies rather than "convert back" to dollars.

This is a failure of the Group of Ten, though (the United States) should be taking the lead." he said. "Someone has to take responsibility. Someone has to

In his article, Mr. Bernstein described a complex plan by which the dollar would be made convertible into other reserve as-sets, but with various safeguards so that the United States would not, at least in the short run, lose monetary reserves.

"The important thing," he says now, "is to create the assurance that the new pattern of exchange rates will last for a reasonable period of time, as it inherently should. But this requires that other countries know what can be done with any new dollars they may have to acquire during the period while our belence of payments remains in deficit." The absence of assurance of some kind of convertibility of

"new" dollars, he feels, raises the danger of a new period of floating currencies, as some foreign countries might prefer to let their currencies float rather than acquire dollars without any element of convertibility. If there were some arrangement for con-vertibility, he believes, the dol-

West German companies will share in a British Petroleum (BP) offshore exploration concession in the gulf state of Abu Dhabi if the Bonn government guarantees the scheme financially, government sources report. Deminex, an explora tion group owned by a number of German oil companies, says it has agreed in principle to buy a me-fifth stake in the HP share of Abu Dhabi Marme Areas Ltd. HP owns two-thirds of the concession, and the French state-controlled Cie. Française des Pétroles the rest, Deminex needs government guarantees to buy into the concession and further government insurance against political risks when the three companies increase their investment in Abu Dhabi, as planned, to up to £120 million. Despite Decline in Europe

Holland's Top Four Firms Stay Buoyant

ROTTERDAM (AP-DJ).-The has hurt the economy of the Netherlands but four major Dutch companies have been mostly unaffected, Barron's Financial Weekly reports.

Big business here is so hig it counts the Dutch market of limited importance: The country's largest employer, Philips' Gloci-lampenfabricken, makes only 9 percent of its sales at home. Hence rising Dutch labor costs and poor sales in West Germany have had relatively little impact on profits.

Four companies headquartered in Holland boast combined sales that exceed this country's $31 billion gross national product.
They include the Royal Dutch/ Shell Group, Unilever NV, Philips' and ARZO.

In the third quarter of 1971, latest period for which figures are available, all four increased their sales compared with the like period the year before. Only Unilever, however, managed to increase its net profit.

Surplus of Oil

Royal Dutch Shell officials admit they failed to foresee either the current slowdown in European business or the warm winter. Hence the embarrassing surplus of oil, which is putting pressure on European prices exactly when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is raising petroleum costs. Freight rates for tankers chartered at the top of the market are eating into profits, too. Poor fourthquarter results seem bound to be repeated in the whole first half

Beyond that point, company economists see an upturn in European business, resulting in part from reflationary measures taken by governments that face elections next year in Germany and France, and in part from a more prosperous United States. By the end of the year, they predict, growth rates in Europe will be back on the historical upward trend. Dutch mutual funds that are the principal stockholders in Royal Dutch Shell find this analysis a trifle sanguine. They say earnings could fall to $4 a share this year, and warn that anything less than that would endanger the dividend because of the company's heavy capital

It is not only that oil production costs are rising. There are also the expensive diversification moves made several years ago, at a time when cash flow seemed ample. Since then, the group has had to borrow heavily from the Rerodollar market, further burdening a balance sheet that has been deteriorating for a decade. Debt currently stands at a

France Says Reserves Of Currency Decline

It is the first monthly decline since last October and compares with a gain of 1.98 billion france in December. The ministry attributed the decline to operations on the foreign exchange market historic high of one-quarter of year's sparkling performance this capital employed.

These cautious investors say that the expected European upturn will have to come right on schedule if Royal Dutch Shell is to pass on its higher costs in rising prices and thereby maintain its vitally needed cash flow. Company sources reply that the group has little to worry about on that score, because its sales are spread wide enough for good dness in Britain and France to offset an unexpectedly slug-gish recovery in Germany and Holland. Indeed, 40 percent of net income is earned in the United States and the rest of the Western Hemisphere, where results this winter are quite satisfactory.

Philips also is counting on a second-half upturn in Europe, television sales in anticipation of the Munich Olympic Games this fall. For all such entertainment goods, incidentally, the sharp upvaluation of the Japanese yen gives the Dutch an edge over some formidable rivals. Sales of professional equipment, which make up 40 percent of Philips' total, might lag behind consumer goods for as much as a year or so. Thus, when the recovery comes, it will be gradual. North American Philips, a U.S. subsidiary, already is contribut-ing improved results to group

Steep declines in profit last year prompted Philips' to whittle payrolls down by 26,000 persons to 340,000 in a year. Inventories have been cut and capital spending had been curtailed to around $320 million in 1971 and may not exceed $245 million. this year. Moreover, investments are being diverted from highwage countries like Holland to Hong Kong, Singapore and

The company's battle to break into the computer industry continues to cost the equivalent of 1 percent of sales. Small com-puters have been yielding profits since 1970 but it is unlikely that the P-1000 line of general purpose machines will make money within three years. The erosion of profit margins, which declined from 6.2 percent in 1962 to 1.1 percent in the sec-ond quarter last year, seems to have been curbed in the autumn.

Investment Splurge AKZO makes synthetic fibers, pharmaceuticals, coatings, salt and other inorganic chemicals worldwide. Directors ruefully admit they joined in the investment splurge in the fiber in-dustry during the past decade and were caught in the ensuing over-capacity. Startup troubles at several synthetics plants last year hurt, too.

Perhaps owing to its involvement in fibers, AKZO is somewhat less optimistic than the others about the prospect of an early turnaround in Europe. That is one reason why the company is accelerating its drive to expand its successful U.S. operations, which already contribute 25 percent of earnings, compared with 30 percent from West Ger-

BRUSSELS, Feb. 7 (AP-DJ) .-The Common Market and Japan signed an agreement today limiting Japanese cotton textile ex-Japan agreed to limit-exports in the three years ending Sept. 30, 1973, to a yearly amount percent higher than quotas authorized in 1970, an KEC spokesman said.

The accord covers all products except yarns and replaces sepa-rate agreements between EEC countries and Japan. It sets limits of 5,910 tons a year on fabrics and 6.835 tons on finished goods. In return the EEC dropped formal quotas on these

In 1970, actual shipments nounted to only 3,804 tons, an KEC source said, well below the old quota. But for certain countries, shipments were closer to previous limits than for others, so the new accord gives Japan more flexibility.

The accord is in the framework of the long-term international agreement on cotton textiles which the EEC has signed with India, Pakistan, Hong Kong, South Korea, Taiwan and Egypt.

Italian Cost of Living Index Up Three Points

ROME, Feb. 7 (Reuters).— Italy's wage-related cost of living index rose three points to 178 in the November to January period, following a two-point rise in the previous three months, the Central Statistical Institute said today.

Each point rise in the index causes an automatic 60-billionlire (about $1 billion) increase in the annual wage costs of industry, commerce and farming. The latest rise is effective from Feb. 1 until April 30. The index is based on June 1956 equalling 100.

Tourism Up in Greece

ATHENS. Feb. 7 (AP-DJ).-Tourists spent a record $305 million in Greece last year, up 48 percent from 1970, the national tourist organization said. The number of tourists rose 40 percent to 236 million.

U.S. Output, Orders Seen On Increase

But Survey Says Costs Of Raw Materials Rise

NEW YORK, Feb. 7 (AF-DJ). -Business picked up again in January, but there was a sharp increase in the number of companies paying higher prices for raw materials and component parts, according to purchasing

The latest survey of 250 members of the National Association of Purchasing Management shows strong gains in both new orders and production during the month. Increases in income orders were reported by 41 percent of those surveyed, up from 29 percent in December, and the highest percentage reporting monthmonth gains in more than four years. Declines were posted by 14 percent in January, down from 17 percent in December.

Production gains were reported by 37 percent of the purchasing agents in January, up from 26 percent in December. About 11 percent reported lower output, compared with 14 percent in

But for the second consecutive month, there was a considerable increase in the number of members saying they paid higher prices for raw materials and component parts. Some 65 percent said they encountered price boosts, up from 33 percent in December and only 4 percent in November.

Big Board Prices Drop In New Profit-Taking

By Vartanig G. Vartan

lion Friday.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7 (NYT) - Hardee Fund, 23 3,8 22 3 4 Stock prices retreated today, off 3 4, with numerous glamour issues sharing in the weakness, as volume also fell on the New York Stock Exchange. The Dow Jones industrial average slipped 2.71 to 963.97. The turnover of 16.93 million shares, featured by what some analysis described as further profit-taking, compared with the previous session's 17.89 million

Glamour issues displaying the biggest point losses on the active list were Winnebago Industries, down 4 3 4 to 61 3.8, and Polarold. down 3 3.4 to 98 3.8.

The weakness in Winnebago. the largest producer of motor homes, followed the weekend announcement that General Motors plans to enter the motor-home market in early 1973, thereby confirming long-rumbling rumors within the industry.

Winnebago ranked as the Big Board's top performer last year, compiling a price gain of 466 per-cent. The stock, adjusted for splits, sold as low as $2 a share in 1968.

GM eased 1/8 to 80 1/8. Although its entry into the motor home industry could affect other companies, sales from this new source would play a relatively minor role at first within GM's own vast industrial complex.

slightly lower in active trading. The exchange's price index was off 0.04 at 27.34. Declines outnumbered advances by 566 to 447.
In the OTC market, the NASDAQ industrial index managed to close ahead 0.11 at 128.56. However, of the 2,865 NASDAQ issues traded, 749 declined, 732 rose and 1339 were unchanged. NASDAQ actives included Penn Life, 34/4 1/2, unchanged, Union Fidelity Corp., 40/40 1/2, up 5/8, Photon, 13 1/4/13 5/8, up 3/4, and

Wiesenberger Adds A New Dimension To Mutual Fund

Performance Reporting

With an intimate knowledge gathered over thirty years of yesterdays, the Wiesenberger organization has designed e mutual fund reporting service for tomorrow-"The Wiesenberger Mutuel Fund Performance Monthly,"

This new performance reporting service combines the best of the old methods with the new computer technology.

The Wiesenbergar Mutual Fund Performance Monthly" will provide Alphe and Beta-a method of performance evaluation suggested in the recent SEC institutional investors' study-on each mutual fund listed. (Greatly over-simplified, Alphe reflects portfoilo selectivity; Beta reflects market sensitivity or riak.) it will also show per cent change in net asset value for the latest month, the year to date, the last twelve months and the previous year.

Moreovar, "The Wiesenberger Mutual Fund Performance Monthly" will be the only service of its kind to covar the fatest five and ten year periods. Mutual funds will be ranked for per cent change in net asset value for all periods . . . and for the Alpha value. We believe that the inclusion of five and ten years periods plus Alpha and Beta represents a major breakthrough in mutual fund evaluation technology.

The new "Wiesenberger Mutual Fund Parformance Monthly" is designed to provide a realistic. balanced eveluation system to fill the needs of the professional investor as the mutual fund industry enters an ere of unprecedented growth

This new service will be available to qualified professional investors starting on March 1.

On the diagramed deal South could have diagnosed a bad trump break and found the means to overcome it. Four hearts is the normal contract, which was reached by the route

West led a low club, South won with the see in his hand and led a heart to dummy's king. East took his ace and returned the diamond four, which West won with the ace after South had played low. West shifted back to clubs, and South made the mistake of ruffing in his hand and playing the heart queen, hoping that West had begun with a doubleton jack. From that point the contract had no chance.

Had South thought harder he could have worked out the heart

South were vulnerable. The bidding: West North South 10 2N.T. Pass: Pass Pass. Pass West led the club two.

Assuming East's play of the diamond four was a normal fourth-best, West had to have at least three diamonds. He was marked with at least three clubs, since he had led low and followed with a higher card. He surely held six spades, since if his overcall had been based on a five-card or even a four-card suit, East would have returned a spade at the third trick. So West's distribution was almost sure to be 6-1-3-3.

With this in mind South should have won the fourth trick in dummy with the club queen and cashed the club king, mean-while discarding two spades from his hand. The position would then be this:

Confident of the distribution, South shaply continues clubs from the dummy, overruffing if Fast plays a trump. He can return to dummy to take more clubs by ruffing the diamond jack, and the defense gets only

THE ARNHEITER AFFAIR

By Netl Sheehan. Random House. 304 pp. Illustrated, $7.95

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

DERHAPS you had an opportunity to read the original version of Neil Sheehan's remarkable story of Lt. Comdr. Marcus Aurelius Arnheiter as it appeared in The New York Times Sunday Magazine on Aug. 11, 1968. I recalled it as I began to read "The Arnheiter Affair," Sheehan's booklength account of the commander's strange career, and I wondered scriously how the original version could possibly be improved upon. In cynical point of fact, wondered if this wasn't a case of fattening up what was essentially a magazine article. Might not such lengthy treatment ac-tually dilute the power of what in its original treatment had been a small but potent drama symbolic, perhaps, of the whole war in Southeast Asia? Mightn't this be old news warmed over? Well, my trepidations could not have been more inappropriate. Not only is this story of a real-life "Caine Mutiny" more com-pelling in its detailed version, but Sheehan has added several new dimensions to his account. For instance, by beginning his account at the point in the affair when powerful pro-Arnheiter forces were in the publicity saddle and it looked from the outside as if the Navy really had goofed by re-moving him from his ahlpboard command, Sheehan demonstrates how easy it is for even a con-scientious reporter to be fooled by appearances as well as what hard digging it takes to get beneath want may seem a clear-cut situation. In his conclusion, Sheehan criticizes not only the Navy, for lacking a system of-scrutiny by some independent authority like that of the Army's inspector general, but also the nation's newspapers as well, for being too easily prey to "the techniques of the government propa-gaudist and the public relations. man."

And while it was tempting to read Sheehan'e original story as a drama of hawks versus doves, and to see the career of Commander Arnheiter himself as either symbolic of American imperialism run amok or an instance of the stalwart warrior undone by a gang of Vietniks, the book makes clear that no such easy conclusions can be drawn. may have wanted a morality play, but Sheehan's careful contrasting of appearances and realities shows that nothing in the affair can be symbolized. Life on board the USS Vance may have imitated the art of Herman Wouk's "The Caine Mutiny" up to a point, but there is no place here for Barney

Solution to Previous Purcle

Greenwald's showdown speech about loyalty above all. Sheehan was wise to limit his discussion of the lessons to be drawn to three brief paragraphs. The Arn. heiter affair was a human one As for the story itself: In the magazine piece, the events appeared bisarre, unreal, fantastic A Navy officer appears out of nowhere and sets in motion mad plans to engage the Viet Cong single-handedly by using the decoy of a 16-foot speedboat complete with flying tiger teeth painted on its bow. Crew rebels. Captain is exposed and relieved of his mmand. It had an air of madcap comedy about it, it seemed an incident outside the grim reality of the war in Southeas Asia.

Whereas in the book-length treatment the drama builds subtly, detail by ridiculous detail. We meet Arnheiter through the apprehensive eyes of the crew, fresh from the command of a captain they disliked but respected. We share the dismay of the engineer-ing officer when he discovers on a briefing tour of the engine room that the new captain couldn't care less about the habits of the Vance's delicate engines: "In the middle of his briefing Mason noticed that the captain had a kind of blank billiard-ball erpression on his boyish face. This guy hasn't been listening to a word I've said, he thought. He's a million miles away.' Arnheiter suddenly interrupted him. Were your parents divorced?' he asked."

It was the little things that betrayed Arnheiter to his men: The decisions to move the wardin reach of the captain's chair. to supply himself with cigars out of the officers' funds and to force attendance at what struck some of the men (especially the Catholics) as Protestant services. It was the little things that slowly drove the men to destruction, destroyed their morale and created an atmosphere in which Arnheiter came close to being assasde compul sinated by a distraught seller whom the captain had inadvertently embarrassed in front of the entire crew. And it is the men the little things that make Sheehan's account so compelling. The high things, like Arnheiter's willful disobedience of orders and his madeap schemes to engage the enemy, are extensions of these little things—jewels on the emperor's crown. -

In fact, so compelling is Shee-han's accumulation of details—st hypnotic is the building of psychological pressures—that the book-מתיבותו בכ takes on a kind of hermetic unreality, as if truth were not only stranger than fiction, but also more fictional as well. Thus, when one comes upon various actual documents in the appendices at the end, one is surprised by their authenticity and the sudden fresh realization that, yes, it all really happened; it's not invented. Which is about the only drawback of the book that I can think of.

Russi Leads Swiss Parade In Downhill; Collombin 2d

SAPPORO, Japan, Feb. 7.-Switzerland has taken complete control of the Olympic Alpine ski-ing downhill gold medals as Bernhard Russi flashed to victo tay in the men's event today.

The wast Swiss skier finished

It was only Saturday that the swiss shocked the ski world when Marie-Thérèse Nadig beat the unbestable Arme-Marie Proell of Austria in the women's downbill. Today's victory, though, was not a surprise.

Enist, 23, had won the world hampionship in Val Gardens, Italy, in 1970. This year, he won the only men's downhill not won by Austria's Karl Schranz who was booted out of the games for fessionalism.

After today's race, Schranz said: The best man left in the race wen four World Cup races this to sesson reportedly watched the race on television. Two other surprises today were the fifth by Norway's Erik Hakker, the fifth by Norway's Erik Hakker, considered a giant dialom specialist, and the 19th place result by France's Henri Duvilland, the World Cup leader. The best French finish was a 15th by Roger Rossat-Mignod, while the best American placing was an eighth by Bob Cochran of Richmond, Vt. Russi's victory today convinced some skeptics.

"Luck they said, when I beat Schranz for the world title," Russi said. "Maybe people will now stop saying my world title victory was a fluke." But of course many people will still say it because Karl wasn't here. Russi said his victory "would have been more satisfying if Karl was here." By Lincoln A. Werden HONOLULU, Feb. 7 (NYT).— Grier Jenes, 25, beat Bob Murphy yesterday on the first hole of a playoff to win the $40,000 top prize in the $200,000 Hawallan

The former national collegiate champion (Oklahoma State), who has been on the pro circuit four years, scored his first tour victory when he holed a putt for a par 4 after Murphy had threeputted for a hogey 5 in the sud-den-death playoff at the Walajae Country Club.

Jones recked off an eight-underpar 64 on the closing round to tie Murphy with a 72-hole total of 274; Murphy had a 69. It was the fourth playoff in five tournsments this year.

The tousle-haired Jones, whose home is Wichita Kans. agreed that it had taken him a long time to break through to a win-

"But there was nothing else for me" he said. "It I couldn't break

80. Id still play, although I decided I'd just keep et it and keep practicing. Any time you shoot a 64 it's the best you can do." In third place was Charles Coody at 275. Marty Fleckman with a spectacular 50-foot birdie putt, snared fourth place at 276. Murphy, who tied with Jones and Dave Eichelberger in the first round, held the lead alone after 36 and 54 holes. The stocky Floridian held an edge until he struck a boger at the 14th hole, while Jones, playing 30 minutes ahead of him. was posting a last nine of 32 that included four birdles. At the 18th hole, Jones pitched his recovery from a hunker within 20 feet of the firs and two-putted for the par 5 that completed the tournament's lowest round. Jack Nicklaus estab-lished the record of 63 for the 7,122-yard course two years ago. Arnold Palmer, with a front nine of 31 that led to a 66, was among those at 279. "If it hadn't been for the 76 in the rain the other day. I might have finished better," he said. Yesterday's round was played in cool ocean

Lee Trevino had a closing-round 70 for a 279 while Jack Nicklaus shot 71 for 285.

Art Buchwald

A Pig Confesses

(I was asked to speak the other night at a fund-raising affair for the National Women's Political Caucus in Washington, D.C. It is very rare for a man to conjess his sins publicly before such a distinguished group. I know the speech may finish me at the YMCA locker room or the tables down at Morey's, but I have to think of my future, in case the women's revolution succeeds. Although what I said was "off the record," my political advisers have warned me that the speech may be taken out of context. Therefore, I have been persuaded to release the entire text.)

GENTLEMEN and sisters . . . forgive me for this, that girls occasion. We meet tonight in and they made my toes tingle this dark cellar to plot our plans for turning this country around.

I know you are asking yourselves, "Why has this man, who is known to his wife as a male chauvinist pig, agreed to partake in these subversive activities?" There are many reasons I believe that this is a sex whose time has come. I have seen the future and it is

I know what it's like to be Buchwald treated as a sex object. I know when someone takes me out to dinner she has only one thing on her mind. I am sick and tired of being pinched and mauled and groped

And let the record read, if the revolution succeeds, that I was here on the platform tonight at your first $25-a-person cocktail party, and if you manage to overthrow those sexist politicians who now rule our nation, I would like to be put in charge of the telephone company.

at-just because I have a pretty

I have a confession to make. I am a sinner.

And I come here tonight to ask your forgiveness and pardon. It's true that I was a male chauvinist vig.

I studied it at school. But it wasn't all my fault. I discovered very early in life that during recess it was easier to fight with girls than boys.

I also discovered et an early age that girls would do things for you that boys wouldn't-like lend you their roller skates, or their homework. I found out other things. I found that girls could make me blush and boys couldn't. I dis-

This is indeed an historic were nicer to touch than boys all the time.

I thought to myself, when I was maybe 9 or 10, that someday I'd like to have a girl of my own -someone who would cook for me, and iron my shirts, and shovel the snow out of the driveway, and make my toes tingle at night.

Now in retrospect these were terrible thoughts I had. But that's how we were all brought up. We thought of women as childbearers, car-pool drivers, breakfast-makers and bed-warmers. And if they couldn't do those things, at least they could type and take shorthand. Yes, sisters, I confess that I was no better than Hugh Hefner or Norman Mailer. I had hit the bottom.

But then one night, while I was reading Playboy and watching my wife scrubbing the floor, a light dawned on me, and I said to myself, "Is this really what I want out of life? How can I be free when this woman that I married is still in chains? What good is it to own the world when she has to stand in line at the Safeway?"

So I picked her up from the floor and said, "Go get a job, I'll squeeze out the mop." Sisters, from that day forward have been one of you. Because of these revelations I can now live with myself. My floors are dirty, but my heart is

And so tonight, I ask your forgiveness for all of the terrible sexist acts I have perpetrated on women, overt and under cover. I appear humbly in front of this group to say that Gloria Steinem and Bella Abzug and Betty Freidan and Kate Millett and Germaine Greer have shown me the way.

All I ask of you is to take me to your bosoms and say, "I forgive you, Arthur. Go and sin

-Irving Marder-

Dickens Reread or the Need for Editors

PARIS (IET).—Does anyone read Dickens today (now that the flurry of interest over his centenary is over)? The answer is yes: I've just finished reading "Oliver Twist," which first appeared, serially, between 1837 and 1839. (I'm a slow reader.) "Oliver Twist" is surely one of the worst books ever produced by a great writer. It's quite true that there are widely differing opinions on this (". . . the purest distillation of Dickens's genius"-Edward Le Comte. 1961. ". . . It is a hazardous experiment to exhibit to the young these enormities, even on the Helot principle of inspiring discust"-Richard Ford in the Quarterly Review, circa 1848). Virtually all of his contemporaries who assailed the book were attacking Dickens on the wrong ground. "He was charged by his critics," the 1968 Fawcett edition notes, with presenting a sordid picture of reality that was too losthsome for fiction." It is true, of course, that they were attacking on the ground that Dickens defended. Dickens believed, and stated repeatedly, that the purpose of the novel was social

The most obvious ground for attacking "Cliver" is within its own context. The central character is paper-thin, totally umbelievable. Even so friendly a critic as Mr. Le Comte points out the oddity that the poorhouse boy's 'mastery of the Queen's English extends to the distinction between 'should' and 'would,' and a difficult sequence of tenses does not trouble him a bit: I should have been very sorry not to have been at home when you and Mr. Maylie went away, sir." Mr. Le Comte says that "Oliver" has "... the primitive appeal of a fairy tale"; but do fairy tales mingle characters who act and speak realistically with one who speaks, to use Mr. Le Comte's own phrase, "in the manner of Little Lord Fauntleroy"? Nor is Oliver himself the only one who breaks the spell every time he opens his month. Here is part of a dialogue between Henry Fairlis and Rose, the girl he hopes to marry:

"'. . . I have watched you change almost from death to life with eyes that turned blind with their eagerness and deep affection. Do not tell me that you wish I had lost this, for it has softened my heart to all mankind.

"I did not mean that," said Rose, weeping. 'I only wish you had left here, that you might have turned to high and noble pursuits again, to pursuits well worthy of

There is no pursuit more worthy of me, more worthy of the highest nature that exists than the struggle to win such a heart as yours, said the young man." Did even the Victorians or anyone else cutside the pages of a Victorian novelreally talk like that? On the other hand. there is plenty of evidence that Dickens had no trouble writing realistic dialogue for his low-life characters. Here is a sequence from a chapter entitled The Burglary:

"Hallo!" oried a loud hourse voice as soon as they set foot in the passage. "Don't make such a row," sald Sikes, bolting the door. 'Show a glim, Toby.' "'Aha! my pal!' cried the same voice. 'A glim, Barney, a glim! Show the gentleman in, Barney, wake up first, if convenient.

It scarcely needs saying that Dickens's gifts his comic genius, his matchless reportorial eye for detail, his narrative skill, his creative imagination—far outwelch the flaws. But his admirers do him a disservice when they say, or at least imply. that every word he wrote was 18-karat gold. "Oliver," in most editions, runs to about 500 pages. Among them are sentences, paragraphs, sequences, perhaps whole chapters, whose deletion would be no loss—would, in fact, improve the book by making it more readable. I'm not suggesting the Dickens be rewritten, much less volunteering for the job. What I am suggesting is that, like most writers, of his day and ours, he needed editing, and epparently he didn't get any. One further point, bearing on an old controversy, as long as we are giving Dickens his lumps. "A trick of the author's that frightens us today." says Mr. Le Comte, "is his fixed epithet for Fagin. This villain is referred to almost exactly 300 times as 'the Jew.' After Hitler and Eichmann we can scarcely be expected to find this, to put it as mildly as possible, in good taste, though it can be defended . . . They go further than they can demonstrate, those who shout that Dickens is here being anti-Semitic..."

Maybe so. But if Fagin is not a gift

the exho to anti-Semites everywhere, then I (to echo Oliver's old friend Mr. Grimwig) will eat

PEOPLE: Tangled Tongues On Detroit Radios

Huberts and Herberts are still causing trouble on the sirways, according to a roundup of radio bloopers in Detroit magazine. For example, a broadcast speech by the late Walter Beuther: "And in those dark days of the great depression, millions of Americans without jobs walked the streets without hopes, and Herbert, er Hubert Humphrey, I mean Hubert, er Herbert Hoover . . ." Or, a meticulous local announcer after a tape of remarks by Sen. Humphrey: "That was the voice of Senator Hubert Frumpey." Sports, too, causes a few difficulties. From the same station on the same program, first announces: "It took 12 innings, but the Tigers won today . ." Second announcer: "The Detroit Tigers lost their third game in a row

Speaking of sports, Charlie Chaplin, 83, challenged Louise Brat, 4, to a wheelchair race at London's Heathrow Airport Sunday. But Louise was too smart for Chaplin, turning him down with: "You'll win because you are higger than me." Chaplin and Louise became acquainted during their flight from Switzerland. Both had wheelchairs waiting for them—Chaplin because he is not so sprightly nowadays and Louise because she was recovering from flu. Though still a tot, Louise recognized the great man. "He's tha man with the baggy trousers and the walking stick," she said.

. . . One more sports note: Golfers at the French Alpine resort of Montgenevre will play the first 17 holes in France and the 18th in Italy because of a recent adjustment to the border. Players will not have to carry passports.

Policemen in Adelaide, Australia, are searching for a hitand-run horseman who galloped away after his horse was in a collision with one ridden by Margaret Morgan, 19. She suffered. a broken leg in the accident.

And in Pasadena, California, two young men found out that fleeing the fuzz on horseback ain't like it was in the good old days. The two stole two horses they found tied up outside a restaurant beside a golf course Sunday. As they rode off they were sighted by a police helicopter which radioed ground units. One youth, who had recently escaped from police custody, had his flight ended when he was knocked off the horse by a tree branch. The other youth dismounted but apparently didn't know much about horses. He slid off the rear of his steed which reacted with 6 kick, police said. However, this young man made a second get away, in a car, and was still at large yesterday, police said. * * *

Thunderous gun salutes echest across the capitals of Engine Scotland and Wales yesterday to monor the 20th anniversary of the accession of Queen Miles. beth II. Crack army units set off full 62-gun volleys in London's Hyde Fark and at the medical Tower of London once a royal prison—as well as at Edinburgh and Cardiff. The official an-niversary was Sunday when the queen spent a quiet day with her family at Windsor Castle near London before returning to the capital. Yesterday she was finalizing plans at Buckingham Palace for her departure today on Southeast Asian tour,
